The template which renders the footer table cell for the column. The fields which can be used in the template are: average - the value of the "average" aggregate (if specified) count - the value of the "count" aggregate (if specified) max - the value of the "max" aggregate (if specified) min - the value of the "min" aggregate (if specified) sum - the value of the "sum" aggregate (if specified) data - provides access to all available aggregates, e.g. data.fieldName1.sum or data.fieldName2.average If the grid is bound using source binding, it will initially be assigned with an empty dataSource without any aggregates. In order to avoid a JavaScript error for an undefined aggregate when the footer is rendered with the empty dataSource, you should check if the field is defined in the template data before accessing the value. If no groups are specified for the actual dataSource, then you will also need to use the field name to access the aggregate value. Example - specify column footer template $("#grid").kendoGrid({ columns: [ { field: "name" }, { field: "age", footerTemplate: "Min: # min # Max: # max # " }, { field: "age", footerTemplate: "Sum: #sum# " } ], dataSource: { data: [ { name: "Jane Doe", age: 30 }, { name: "John Doe", age: 33 } ], aggregate: [ { field: "age", aggregate: "min" }, { field: "age", aggregate: "max" } ] }); Example - specify footer template Min: # min # Max: # # $("#grid").kendoGrid({ columns: [ { field: "name" }, { field: "age", footerTemplate: $("#template").html() } ], dataSource: { data: [ { name: "Jane Doe", age: 30 }, { name: "John Doe", age: 33 } ], aggregate: [ { field: "age", aggregate: "min" }, { field: "age", aggregate: "max" } ] }); Example - specify footer template when using source binding $(function() { var viewModel = kendo.observable({ dataSource: new kendo.data.DataSource({ data: [ { category: "Beverages", name: "Chai", price: 18 }, { category: "Beverages", name: "Chang", price: 19 }, { category: "Seafood", name: "Konbu", price: 6 } ], group: [ { field: "category" }, aggregate: [ { field: "price", aggregate: "sum" } ] }); kendo.bind($("#body"), viewModel); }); Example - specify footer template when using source binding and there are no groups $(function() { var viewModel = kendo.observable({ dataSource: new kendo.data.DataSource({ data: [ { category: "Beverages", name: "Chai", price: 18 }, { category: "Beverages", name: "Chang", price: 19 }, { category: "Seafood", name: "Konbu", price: 6 } ] aggregate: [ { field: "price", aggregate: "sum" } ] } ); kendo.bind($("#body"), viewModel); }); kendo-gridkendo-ui I'm building a grid that needs to have a sum in the footer, but the built in sum aggregate doesn't quite work for my needs. As an example, say I am building a grid with a list of products that I am selling. I also have a field that says "Eligible for discount". I want to display a sum of the prices of the products, but only for the items that are eligible for discount. Ideally, I'd love to be able to pass in a function like below, but I don't think the Kendo grid supports it. function(seed, model){ if(model.EligibleForDiscount == true){ return seed.Price + model.Price; } return seed.Price; } It would also have to automatically be refreshed upon updates to the grid. Is the only way to do this by manually handling the events on the grid and using the help of jQuery to update the footer template? New to Kendo UI for Angular?
